

Aloha

Being born and raised on the island of Maui, life was the best. I was fortunate enough to grow up with all of my cousins living within walking distance of each other. Beach days were pretty much everyday. The streets were less crowded and playing on the street with the neighborhood kids was probably the best description of living in Hawai'i.

As i mentioned before, as a child beach days were everyday. I learned how to dive, fish and boogie board. My dad would haul my cousins and i in our lifted blue Jeep loaded up with fishing poles, buckets, bait, our yellow kayak.

But With the current median house price over a million dollars, working 2-3 jobs the median income household cannot qualify for an afford median priced home.

Having more prospects for affordable housing on Maui makes it possible for my kids to experience the child hood I had.
